

Abstract

The invention relates to a process for producing an object which has optical layers.

According to the invention such a process comprises the following process steps:

- To a substrate of plastic material several optical layers are applied;
- the optical layers are applied by means of a chemical plasma-impulse vaporization (PICVC).